

Agricultural Competitiveness White Paper – Submission IP69
Brent Adams
Submitted 10 February 2014 via website's contact form

Primary producers

The problem we face in Agriculture today is Government over many years has created a environment of welfare recipients, and those who continue to claim welfare have been incentivised to relocate to rural towns away from the city.

The major problem we face in Australia is our children are growing up foreign to agriculture and almost with resentment in many cases, as the farmer tries to keep cost down and be competitive; they have had to apply cruel practices, cage chickens, etc etc.

The agriculture industry will always experience tough times, for Australian farmers to be able to survive, the government need to create a positive environment.

AS our kids are all fussing over the city, they are starting to focus on what they eat.

Allow foreign investment like this

Migrants who have come to Australia illegally, half pay to work in manufacturing plants in regional Australia. People who have been unemployed for more than 6 months, must either move to regional Australia or lose their entitlements.

Stop lawyers and solicitors from destroying all enthusiasm in this country, rebuild our manufacturing laws. If you do not start the youth will grow up hating previous generations, as they do in UK and USA

Set a blanket rule all Australian produce that can be grown here, 60% must be manufactured in a Australia.

This will give migrant a great sense of community, rebuild our rural areas and the more people in these areas the more jobs created, more jobs created = more sports teams, more community people, everyone in Australia now sees farming as a 3rd world thing to do.